CHAKRAS

'Chakra' is a Sanskrit word for wheel or disk. In traditional beliefs, each of the seven chakras is an energy point at specific points on the body. For example, the first chakra is at the base of the spine, the third chakra is in the solar plexus, and the seventh chakra is on the crown of the head.

Western practice also associates each chakra with a given colour, ranging from red (for the first, or 'root' chakra), through the visible colour spectrum (the rainbow) to violet for the seventh, or 'crown' chakra.

VIOLET
(the crown)

INDIGO
(the brow)

BLUE
(the throat)

GREEN
(the heart)

YELLOW
(the solar plexus)

ORANGE
(the pelvis/groin area)

RED
(the base of the spine)

ORIGINS

Chromotherapy – also known as colour therapy, is a time-proven method of using coloured light as a form of alternative medicine or therapy. Its beneficial use was recorded thousands of years ago in ancient Egypt, and as an Indian medicine known as Ayurveda. Increasingly, this ancient wisdom is being used to combat the damaging stress and energy drain of our modern 21st century world.

Natural healing is based on the understanding that the electromagnetic energy of colour affects us all, with the different wavelengths of each colour being associated with each of the body's chakras. Colour therapy/ chromotherapy is used to alleviate many of today's toxic ailments, including stress, depression and lack of energy.

Through the combined application of the seven colours (which range through the visible spectrum of red, orange, yellow, green, blue, indigo and violet), balance & healing can be achieved in both the body & mind.

THE HUMAN EFFECT

VIOLET - (the crown) promotes enlightenment, revelation and spiritual awakening while soothing the internal organs, relaxing muscles and calming the nervous system.

INDIGO - (the brow) acts as a calming sedative, promoting intuition and it is said to be helpful in controlling bleeding and abscesses.

BLUE - (the throat) encourages communication and knowledge. Thanks to its de-toxifying effect, it is used to treat liver disorders and jaundice.

GREEN - (the heart) produces a feeling of calm that is considered effective in ulcer treatment. Its apparent antiseptic properties may alleviate bacterial infection.

YELLOW - (the solar plexus) stimulates wisdom & clarity. Renowned for its decongestant and bacterial actions, it also invigorates the digestive and lymphatic systems.

ORANGE - (the sacral, pelvis/groin area) arouses enthusiasm and sexual stimulation, and is considered to possess anti-bacterial properties and provide relief for digestive discomforts.

RED - (the base of the spine) imparts energy, empowerment and motivation. It is believed to improve circulation and stimulate red blood cell production.
